

CHANCE TO GET IN

Class of 1918 Has Opportunity for Voluntary Induction.

Engineering Corps Thrown Open for Men Until July 15.

AFTER THAT COMES DRAFT

Many Specialized Duties Are Open to Young Men.

Need of Recruits Will Take Available Men From Kansas.

Effective service men of the 1918 class were today given an opportunity to enroll immediately for service in the engineering corps. Skilled men, whites only—who are qualified for general military service, will be accepted under the new call which came today to the office of Charles S. Huffman, adjutant general.

The order today does not set a state quota. It asks for the number of available men in each county. Special questionnaires will be sent to all local boards today and voluntary inductions will be made prior to July 15. After that date, men of either the 1917 or 1918 class may be involuntarily inducted by the government.

Today's order is the first opportunity afforded the 1918 class for voluntary service. Men needed for the July quotas in all counties and districts will be denied the privilege of voluntary enrollment. Men of the 1918 class, who enroll under the new call, will waive all time limits for classification and exemption. It is quite probable they will be taken immediately into some branch of the engineering corps.

For Special Service.

Men who can qualify for one of the many branches of the special service are needed at once. The special call is for men qualified for following services:

Auto repairers, ax men, boatmen, bridge carpenters, cabinet makers, caulkers, concrete foremen, concrete workers, construction foremen, cooks, draftsmen, electricians, gas engineers, stationary engineers, farmers, horse-shoers, lithographers, machinists, buglers, photographers, plumbers, powder men, quartermen, riggers, fitters, shoemakers, surveyors, tailors, teamsters, telephone operators, timbermen, typographers.

Should volunteer enlistments prior to July 15 be insufficient to meet quotas, the government will call specially qualified men under the selective draft law. A record of all available men in Kansas for engineering corps service will be completed this week.

Mr. Williams, who lives in one part of the double house at the northeast corner of Monroe and Laurel streets, heard footsteps in the unoccupied side of the house yesterday morning. A communicating door between was not locked and when Mr. Williams opened it he saw a man whose face and head were covered with blood. The man ran from the house and fell exhausted in front of the fire station. The police were notified but before their arrival the man had left. His identity is being sought.

name was not learned nor how he received his injuries.

L. P. Fraser, of the Graham Clothing store, is a very patriotic man. He is too old to fight, and is already on the employed list. The question as to what he could do for his country caused Mr. Fraser many sleepless hours. Suddenly an idea came to him, he would grow a mustache and it should not be cut off until the Kaiser was whipped. Just how a mustache in Kansas would help whip the Kaiser in Germany, Mr. Fraser did not explain. The mustache grew apace until it was plainly perceptible and then Fraser's wife and daughter laid down the law. It had to come off, and off it came!

FOR CANNING, 25 LBS.

This Is Limit Placed on Sugar Sales in Kansas.

Wichita, Kan., July 2.—A limit of twenty-five pounds has been placed on sales of sugar for canning purposes. It was announced by the food administration today. After the first twenty-five pounds of sugar is used the housewife can get additional quantities only by calling on the county administrator or his assistants in the various townships and obtaining permission to buy more.

Formerly it was possible to buy additional quantities without obtaining a permit.

The rule became necessary because some persons bought sugar under false pretenses. The new rule makes it imperative that sugar bought for canning must be used for canning or more cannot be obtained.

The food administration also ruled that no household can have more than a week's supply of sugar on hand at any one time except for canning, and the limit to have in the house for canning at any one time is twenty-five pounds. Persons who have more than the twenty-five pound limit are advised to dispose of it by resale back to the grocer or by sale to less fortunate neighbors so as to escape the hoarding regulations.

Germany Sought to Control Publicity Organ in Ally Country.

Rome, July 2.—Evidence of "bolshevism" in Italy were brought to light today by the Rome Messaggero and the Milan Secolo.

Reporting the testimony of the Rev. Father Prestosi, in a libel trial, those papers showed that alleged accomplices of Bolshevism offered $1,500,000 for the newspaper property in 1915. The offer was refused.

The Messaggero declared that Senator Annunzio was chosen to control the proposed "journalistic trust."

A Fantastic Curfew Hat.

The sketch shows one of the varieties of this new bit of millinery which has been put out by a woman who has combined several fashions into one.

The hat is made of gray straw and corded silk, and its upturned brim is lined with Chinese blue taffeta. There is a gray velvet ribbon that passes under the crown and over the brim, goes across the crown and ties in a defiant bow which no Puritan would have tolerated for one second.

It may be the presage of millions of military men in France that gives the impetus to this band of ribbon under the chin but, whatever the reason, the fact is that it is a dominant fashion.

It is considered exceedingly becoming both to young and old. Those to whom age has been unkind by putting wrinkles and flabby flesh below the ears, can hide such defects by this passage of a ribbon.

Once upon a time women used the ribbon around the neck, and while this trick did hide wrinkles, it always pushed the flesh upward and outward. This is not pleasant contribution to the contour of the face, as everyone knows, so the stout forbore to use the ribbon and the scrawny ones contrived to keep it becoming.

This hat band, however, carries the flesh up with it in a gentle curve, and probably it dissolves in the hair. Of that we do not know, but there is some mysterious camouflage of the flesh that is entirely beneficial to the silhouette of the face.

England Has Put Out the Curfew Hat, and British Women Have Made It So Fashionable That American Milliners Are Taking It Up.

New York.—So far America has no signal for "lights out," but the curfew rings, in a figurative sense, on all our social doings. Everything ends hours earlier than it used to do in the days before this turmoil. We have learned to keep good hours, and perhaps, who knows, there may be a healthier race of beings after the war, if we can place credence on the opinion of the doctors that early to bed and early to rise is a good way to keep strong and well for whatever troubles life offers.

Great Britain gives France the credit for naming the two new hats, "Curfew" and "Munitions."

Curfew, as the dictionary explains it, is an ancient police regulation which requires all fires and lights to be put out at a given signal. In those days tics showing how much women needed to spend a year to be well dressed. All sorts of budgets were shown from the society woman who spent ten thousand dollars a year and had to skip and scrape to make that do, to the woman who could by dint of cleverness and good management feel a hundred. We got rather tired of hearing about it and the magazines gave us a respite. Now the matter has been brought forward again, more or less as an outcome of war conditions. The Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington investigated the clothes expenditures of six hundred women, not to find an average so much as to find what really is necessary under existing conditions and advanced clothes prices, to keep a woman well dressed or adequately dressed.

One hundred and twenty-five dollars, it was decided, would suffice. It was found that 93 per cent of the women whose budgets were investigated actually did spend less than $200. They were just average working women and not one of them earned more than $1,200 a year.

No doubt the figures of this investigation will be helpful to the bureau of labor statistics. Perhaps they will show employers that if they wish to have their women dress well they must pay them higher wages than they do. To every woman such a listing must be interesting at the present time when the question of economy and thrift is so prominent in our minds.

If these six hundred women were able to give an accounting of their expenditures on clothes, then every woman ought to be able to do so, too. Yet a good many of us could tell within a hundred dollars how much we spend, and it would be just as difficult to say how much we need to spend. Really it is worth while to keep accounts for a year, or six months at least. Some of the results of your listings will surprise you. One young married woman on a moderate income was able to conclude that she hadn't solved the problem of shoe buying. She also found that she spent dollars on velvet, and she concluded at once that she did not get fifteen dollars' worth of satisfaction out of her velvet. She also found out that she did not like efficient pajamas in keeping with condition. Any woman who takes the trouble to keep some such reckoning can make it a real pleasure.
